SIMPLE PRAYER

There is a gentle breeze on the North St. Vrain River tonight. It is strong and powerful. It says, "I will cool you, but not make you cold." The river roars, the robins chirp of spring, and my heart slowly beats a chant that calls out for greater love. It calls for wisdom and it calls for peace. It calls for clarity and it calls for renewal.

The universe is answering in all its mysterious and wonderful ways. Tonight, I offer a simple prayer, "May I have eyes to see and ears to hear. May I taste the sweetness of the Divine and smell the sweet fragrance of the Mother who longs to nurture and be nurtured. Oh, how my senses long to know you, God, as I touch the rock this evening." Offering this simple prayer, I sit in faithful anticipation.
